STORY OF A WRECKED LIFE

Once Beautiful and Refined Maryland Girl Succumbs to Alcohol.

Virgle Davall's Miscrable Existence Ended in Pain and Suffering at a Cheap Lodging House.

This is the story of poor Virgie Duvall, whose lifeless wreck of a body was removed from a quarter lodging on the avenue, to Lee's Ghapel for identifica-It has been identified, and those who knew her say, "we knew her well. She had a brilliant mind and a pretty form and face. She could have graced a happy home, but a love for drink drove her from respected society and property to a horrible life and a terrible death.

She came here some years ago, from Frederick, Md., a pretty country girl of and remained a few years. Her wit and beauty led her into the association of educated men. The rapid pace of a few brief months left her cursed with a love for whistey. Soon she drank to such excess that she was dismissed from the de-partment. Then she entered the Pension Bureau, and while there she acquired a house and tot on Capitol Hill. She married, but her busband soon left her because she drank, and again she lost position. Her property was sold for debt, and all she had left was some handsome furniture. This she stored and took a at the Hotel Belyedere, Third street and the Avenue. Piece by piece her fur-niture was sacrificed. Gradually she drank more and more excessively, and was soon turned into the street. She fell too low to even live among the scarlet women She was driven from house to house, until even the vilest of these places was closed

Day and night she could be seen upor the street, sometimes appearing well, but generally illy-clad. So vittated was her taste that whisky would not satisfy her appetite. At last she became a victim of the deadly wood alcohol. By day she slept in the cheapest of lodging-houses, in beds that cost from 10 to 30 cents. At night she resorted to the streets. Frequently she could be seen the only woman in the 3-cent lunch-rooms and 10-cent lodging-houses around the lower part of the Avenue and Chinatown. She begged for her food and bedingstafternight. All she possessed was upon ber back. Her existence was below the imagination of those who did not see it. The pity of it all was that her education and intelligence would have placed her on a higher plane in life could one weakness and curse but have been eliminated.

Wednesday night she took a 25-cent room at No. 326 Pennsylvania avenu. She had been there many times before and Mrs. Widelicombe paid little attention to the nfortunate creature. At 4 c'clock Thursday afternoon the weak, wretched, saffercreature crawled, undressed, to the proprietress' room, and in the agony of death, rigid, pailed and cold, fearning at the mouth and greaning with pain, she threw herself upon a sofa. "I'm dying," my pain." Dr. A. A. Marstella was sent for, but he would not treather. She could not eat and said she had not tasted food for two days. An empty alcohol bottle in her room told the reason of her agony and her to the hospital, but they refused to have anything to do with her. landlady did not know that she could call an ambulance, although she felt that the poor creature's life could be saved at they removed her quickly. Yesterday morning Mrs. Boadley, formerly proprie-tress of The Belvedere, identified the ins as those of her old boarder. Relatives in Frederick, Md., were notified, and this morning brief services will be held over the remains in Lee's Chapel.

At 11:40 o'clock they will be shipped back to the scenes of her girlhood, the home of her people and the place she left ten years ago a beautiful country girl, with the horriblelife that was ended in a cheap lodging Thursday night all before her.

REVOLUTION IN IRELAND.

A Wild Story Published in a London Newspaper.

London, March 19.- The Dublin correspondent of the Daily Graphic telegraphs a story, which is taken in all serious by the police of that city, who are greatly exercised over the prospect of a raid by Irish-Americans. It appears that the Dublinites are going to celebrate the centennary of the Irish revolution, which began in 1798, and which cost the lives of 150,000 Irishmen, and 20,000 Englishmen before it was suppressed in the year

According to the Graphic's correspond est the police have learned from their agents in the United States that Irish-Americans who sympathize with the move ment, intend to take part in the celebra to bring to Ireland as many Irish exiles nent part in the centenary. The authorities have learned that the visitors will Include a number of dangerous extremists. and the gravest fears are entertained for the public safety.

Forewarned is forestrued, however, and the Dublin police will have plenty of time to appeal to the imperial authorities if essary to prevent Ireland falling a prey to these dangerous agitators. The corporation of Dublin, which does not appear to share in the fears of the po-Hee that the coming of the Irish-Americans portends another revolution, has granted the use of the city hall for purposes of

MR. CHANDLER'S REJOINDER

Senator Davis Makes a Speech in Favor of the Arbitration Treaty as It Has Been Amended The New Senators Listen with Deep

The Senate yesterday afternoon, in executive session, spent three hours in the discussion of the general treaty of artitration with Great Britain, and, without taking any action, adjourned over until next Monday.

The debate of the afternoon had a preade in the shape of a lecture delivered to both parties by Mr. Allen, Populist, of Nebraska. Mr. Allen intimated that the Democrats and Republicans were delaying matters in declining to fill the vacancies in the committees, and asserted that the business of the country would be expedited by filling these vacancies and getting the machinery of the Schate in shape to do its work. He called upon the leaders of the two parties to get together and complete the organization of the Senate.

Mr. Chandler replied briefly to the reremarks of Mr. Allen, telling that every body knew that neither of the two great parties had a majority vote in the Senate. nd that under the existing order of things it was impossible for either of them to or-

After this little flurry had quieted down Mr. Davis, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, addressed the Senate n the arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain. The speech of Mr. Davis demanded the closest atten tention, and Senators gathered about him paying the closest heed to what the chairman of the committee had to say. It was noted that the new Senators appeared anxcus to get all the information possible and listened throughout to Mr. Davis' exposition of the meaning and scope of the treaty and the purport of the amendments submitted by the committee. Mr. Davis said that the treaty as sent to the Sennteby secretary Olney could not have had his approval, and he was quite certain that in at shape it could not have secured a single vote in the committee and probably not more than a dozen in the Sennte.

The Senate have given the subject the most careful consideration, and since the treaty had gone to the committee a second dime, that committee, in the light of the Senate in favor of the proposed constituprevious debate in the Senate, had sought to overcome all the objections that had in this. The scope of the treaty had not reported yesterday. The number of bills been interfered with, but in the consideration of the administrative features of the tresty, the committee had amended it so as to safeguard it against any possible loophole that night operate to the disadvantage of this country. King Oscar, as the umpire, had been eliminated, because it was believed there was no need for the designation in the instrument itself, of any one to act in this capacity.

With reference to the stipulation that members of the Supreme Court should sit as members of this tribunal, Mr. Davis said that there had been serious question in the minds of the committee as to greater power than had been intended by these who framed the Constitution. Again, It had been argued that as members of the court of last resort in this country, these judges might be called upon, either before or after their sitting upon the tribunal, to sit in their judicial capacity on questions either similar to or growing out of the finding of the tribunal. The Supreme Court was also, Mr. Davis said, very hard worked, and the committee had tional duty. For that reason the designa-tion of members of the Supreme Court had been stricken out and the provision made to read that "jurists of repute," without mentioning any court, should be appointed by and with the advice and consent of the

The essential amendment, Mr. Davis pointed out, was the one that maintained the authority of the Senate as a part of the treaty-making power of the United States. It had been agreed that a clause be inserted providing that all questions to be submitted to this tribunal should first be submitted to the Senate, as a part of the treaty-making power, for its Senate had passed upon any question would the President have authority to submit it to arbitration under this treaty. Under such a proviso, Mr. Davis said, none of the prerogatives of the Senate would be interfered with, and every right of this country would be protected. The Senate was the treaty-making power, and as it had the right to ratify and approve any treaty that came before so it would, under this treaty, have the sole power of saying what should be or should not be submitted to arbitration under this general treaty. Therefore, Mr. Davis saw no good reason why the treaty should not be ratified, and he urged the Senate to take as speedy action as possible the magnitude of the subject under discussion considered.

Mr. Davis was followed by Mr. Stewart, who antagonized the idea of entering into any kind of treaty with Great Britain, a country which he characterized as the big st land-grabber on the face of the earth A treaty that we might make would be enered, he said, if the interests of Great Britain demanded that it be ignored. To enter into this treaty was equivalent to tying the hands of a future Congress. Congress alone had the power to declare war, was intended to take from the Congress the power on this subject fodged in it by the Constitution. Mr. Turple of Indiana spoke briefly in favor of the treaty as amended. He said there could be no harm growing from a treaty guarded as was this one, and there no longer existed any reason why the convention should not be ratified. The convention will be called up by Mr. Davis again the first of the week.

DUEL ON A TRAIN.

Two Prominent Men Quarrel and Both Are beat

Cumberland, Md., March 19 .- Two wellknown men were badly injured in a des-perate fight with pistols on board a railroad train, near here last night. Frank E. Thompson, manager of the Blackwater Boom and Lumber Company at Davis W. Va., is supposed to be fatally hurt.

Carl Degler, son of a saloonkeeper at Davis, W. Va., was convicted recently by a jury at Parsons, W. Va., of a criminal offense, A petition was drawn up by Lloyd Hansford, an attorney, at Parsons, asking Judge Holt to grant Degler a new trial. The court decided that the petition was in the nature of an intimidation.

Processes were then issued against the sixty-five persons at Davis, who had signed the petition, and they appeared before Judge Holt, at Parsons, yesterday. Col. A. B. SAID TO BALK HANNA'S PLAN

The Chairman Desires to Make Major Dick Secretary and Place Him in Charge-The President's Cousin Will Probably Retire When He Assumes His New Position.

It appears that Senator Hanna has encountered at least one stone wall. He has found a man who has much more comprehensive influence with the new President than he himself possesses. Cousin Osborne is not only going to London, and to draw the juciest salary of any living Republican officeholder, but he insists on interfering with many of Mr. Hanna's pet schemes. Senator Hanna is said to have been very anxious to get Osborne out of the country so he could have the sine-cure position of secretary of the national committee, which the latter now holds. for his own retainer, Major Charles F. Dick. Osborne has not resigned, and it is said, will not resign until he begins to draw that succelent salary in London Meantime Dick is out in the cold, having already declined the tender of the Fourtt Assistant Postmaster Generalship. Just after inauguration, Senator Hanna poitely intimated that Col. Osborn resign and let Dick begin to draw the

But Osborne went off to Boston without complying. Now Osborne is back it is said in response to a delicate bint from the cousin-President. It is even said that Col. Osborne and Major Dick did not agree during the campaign, and that Osborne hopes to influence the selection of another man as secretary. Mail at national headquarters has been accumulating for sev-eral days the correspondence department is in a quandary, as little can be done until the secretaryship is settled. Senator Hanna is hopeful of getting Osborne out and Dick in Monday, But, unless the President intervenes. Osborne will continue sec retary until he is comfortably enscenced

The World of Business

There was in Wall street vesterday after oon what to one or two shrewd traders looks like a reaction. These traders will sell the market this morning and will expect to see it go with them. There has been considerable selling of long stock during the last two days. Yesterday all day long the market had a tired look In the closing hours there was a considerable drop in several directions. After the several days of advancing prices, all this has much the appearance of fore running a decided reaction.

The great break of the day was on Jersey Central. There seemed to be no particular reason why the stock should be picked out by the bears, but it went down terribly, and led the market in its afternoon declines. Jersey was up as high as 941-8 in the morning and in the last hour went down to 90 and something, a break of 4 points. Moore & Schley were the people who did the larger part of the selling of Jersey Central. They sold it short, and probably expect to get out of it at even a less figure than the lowest today.

There is a New York rumor that the Sugar Company does not wish the stock to go any higher during the tariff agitation, and that they would not object to a point or two more decline. This is a reason enough idea, and as, unlike a great many of the New York rumors, it has reason or its side, there may be some foundation. However, I was told by my Sugar sharp yesterday that in his opinion no one ought to allow Sugarto get down to 112 without purchasing. There were not any great fluctuations in the stock vesterday. It opened at 114, went up to 115 3-8, and closed at 114 1-8. The reports are most favorable as to the carnings of the company during the last year. It is even said that they are the largest the concern has ever had. Also there is still a very strong belief all over that the Sugar Company will not be thrown down very badly by tariff bill. People insist that the company will be able to earn 12 per cent if no change is made in the bill, and also insist that it may be even much improved in the Senate.

Practically lower prices for Bessemer pig and for billets seem to have been the result of speculative over purchasing at the late revival, in expectation of an advance, which has not shown itself. Delay in fixing lake ore prices has also had an influace. There is less demand for American iron and steel for export, particularly for northern products.

At most of the larger centers the feelng of encouragement is stronger among merchants at the prospect for continue improvement in trade, yet the increase in clume of business in dry goods, groceries, hats and clothing compared with preceding weeks, and with like weeks in previous years, does not equal anticipations.

How could we bear this heavy cross; SAFE DEPOSIT AND TRUST COMPANIES. The loneliness, the cruel pain, Did we not know our eathly loss Was her eternal gain. No thorny paths for her to tread Throughout the coming changeful No bitterness of life to death From this vale of tears; For ere the touch of sin could blight Or sorrows shadow cloud her way, God kindly took her from earth's night To heaven's eternal day.
